

Abstract

[0051] The invention relates to a surface reactor (1) consisting of a copper-tin alloy for converting unsaturated hydrocarbons contained in propellants and fuels. The surface reactor (1) is configured in one-piece from a long chip or wire-shaped body. The surface reactor (1) is configured from the alloy or from a support material that has been appropriately shaped and coated with the alloy.